3 Talk about safe subjects at first. When you are first getting to know a girl that you like, you should be careful not to delve too deeply into personal issues. Stick to things tha her feeling uncomfortable or vulnerable you can ask about her favorite music seen recently, or her hobbies.[1]

- Avoid discussing topics that might be uncomfortable for her such as your ex-girlfriends, family conflicts, or your religion.

Instead, focus on questions that help you get to know her better. Ask her about her likes and dislikes, her friends and family, her interests, etc.

"TALK ABOUT SAFE SUBJECTS"?

FAMILY, RELATIONSHIPS, EX- GIRLFRIENDS?

I SEE. SO I HAVE TO AVOID THOSE TOPICS,HUH?

3 Meet her gaze. Confidence is sexy, and one of the most confident things you can do is look her in the eyes when you ask her out. While it may feel more comfortable to look at the floor and mumble your question to her, this will
